

RTD: Getting Real

Round Table Discussion (RTD) is about putting learning experience into context and implementing the real thing at the workplace. The programme delivers practical information based on speakers' vast experience in leading higher education institutions. By having experienced higher education leaders sharing the challenges and success stories of leadership, RTD drives participants to deal with the actual problems more effectively instead of being idealistic about those problems.

The dynamics of higher education in Malaysia today are driving the demand for a new set of leadership skills and capabilities. Learn how the role of higher education leaders is being transformed and varies from one leader to another. Sharing knowledge by current leaders helps emerging talents develop a deeper understanding of the intricacies of higher education leadership. It gives them greater exposure to what is happening in the organisation and also higher education in a broader context. Listening to shared successes and failures permits emerging talents to gain new insights into the activities of leaders and their decision-making processes.

In nurturing future leaders for higher education, it is important for current leaders who have attended AKEPT leadership programme to share their knowledge and expertise with emerging talents. Getting Real offers an interactive platform to allow a deeper discussion on applying newly acquired knowledge in the real situation of the higher education institutions. The sharing based on experience and knowledge enables current leaders to facilitate emerging talents in facing realistic career expectations.

Participants will learn significance of effective leadership and recognise how to overcome obstacles using realistic approach.
